

THE HAWK

FAMILY NEWSLETTER OF LAVEEN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL • NOVEMBER, 2023

Dear Families,

Persistence and perseverance are important skills to develop and practice.

Think back to a time when completing a hard or challenging task required you to follow every step to perfection in order to achieve success (like assembling IKEA furniture or doing your taxes). Chances are your brain automatically utilized some pretty specific reading behaviors. Maybe you read all the directions before you started to get an overall scope of the process.

As you began, you probably reread certain steps multiple times. When your brain sensed some frustration, you might have taken a break and then jumped right back in.

Because you wanted to complete the entire task successfully, you used your reading strategies, but you also used your skills of persistence and perseverance to power through until you were satisfied, even if you experienced frustration along the way.

However, reading strategies don't work if a child isn't motivated to finish the process. Many students lack experience with persistence and perseverance. They haven't been asked to complete challenging tasks from start to finish, making persistence and perseverance unfamiliar feelings. Plus, we all know that when feelings are new, they are often overwhelming. It doesn't mean kids are lazy... it means they haven't practiced these life skills... yet.

As parents, engage your children in opportunities for what educators call a "productive struggle." Essentially, this is when a task is challenging and requires some grit to continue. They struggle until the task is completed.

If your child persists and perseveres through a difficult task (either mentally or physically), they'll be rewarded when success is reached. As adults, we know this is true only because we've experienced it over and over again in life. Children often haven't experienced this... yet.

Let's work together at home and at school to teach our children the skills of persistence and perseverance by providing opportunities for them to productively struggle through difficult tasks all the way to the end.

Thank you for your continued support!

With gratitude,

Dr. Robert Caplinger, Principal

SUNS GROW TO GO CHALLENGE!

Each year our 3rd-8th grade students compete academically to win the opportunity to attend a Phoenix Suns game with their families. Winning classrooms are determined by measuring academic growth in reading and math, measured by the district's NWEA MAP assessments. The Block 1 classroom that demonstrates the most growth from Spring, 2023 - Winter, 2023 will win the challenge and watch the Suns vs. Wizards on 12/17.

GIFTED NEWS

Did you know that a gifted student's brain grows at different rates? When the social, emotional, physical, intellectual, and creative aspects of a person develop on a trajectory that is outside of norms, and at an uneven rate, it is described as asynchronous development (NAGC.org). This asynchronous development can lead to conflicting and confusing behaviors and abilities in our students. A kindergartener may be able to read at a 4th grade level and hold mature conversations with older peers, but may struggle with on-level math work. The NAGC has a parent tip sheet that goes more in depth about this aspect of our gifted students. On the tip sheet are some suggestions of ways to support your student through this asynchronous development, including to read books with exceptional characters in them. Below are two book lists of such books and characters. (Please note: I have not read all of these books - they are merely suggestions and not recommended or required.) Book List Book List 2 I'm here to help! –Faye Uttech, Gifted Instructional Coach
